

Formal Season

Oh god this part of me won't ever go to sleep, cause god this part of me won't ever go extinct, and god? I just thought this kinda thinkin must mean something.
if you're even listening.
is anybody out there?
well? is anybody there?
well, I don't even care, I just thought you should know.

I just thought you should know that when you lied to me, to my face, this place took on a whole different light.
when I saw I'd become what I swore I'd never be, darling, I nearly took myself to a mountain, where I'd live in seclusion, regretting never a ring around you and all the trees on the mountain would like your illusion when I turn my head too fast cause I thought I heard you singing - "it's a lovelife for all of time" - and it keeps me awake when I'm alone at night.
this is my last goodbye so I let it rhyme, this time I think I'll tell you what my car-crash-heart woulda said about burning bridges and driving off of them about loaded guns and loaded friends and our hearts held hostage, but I'm headstrong and I always thought that we were better than that,
like we were legends from a Roman Coliseum, but now history's passed and it's Formal Season, all goodbyes and tears in eyes, we're just college sweethearts severing ties to go make a 'real world life' but I hope that you never forget that we were better than that,
like we were legends from a Roman Coliseum,
we're just college sweethearts severing ties to go make a 'real world life' but I hope that you never forget that -
